SYNOPSIS OF EPISODE-1

Shu's parents died when he was child, and brought up by Jo (Joichiro), a friend of his parents. He works for Jo's cleaning company, and Jo and his friend detective Shiori have been looking after Shu. Jo plans to retire and give his company to Shu.

That night, Jo has been shot dead by someone at the port. However, the news reports that his death was an accidental fall into the sea, which confuses Shu. Shiori tells Shu that the police have an organization called SOS (secret operation service), that Jo is their hit-man, and that Shiori is the head of SOS.

And she shows Shu a surveillance video of the crime scene, which shows Mitsuki shooting Jo and dropping him into the sea. She was the target suspected of providing a large amount of money to a terrorist organization, and he was killed by her. So, Shu decides to become a hit-man and take over Jo's mission to get revenge!

Mitsuki's public face is that of a popular cartoonist. On the day of her cartoon award ceremony, Shu targets her at the party. Shiori's orders were to kill her by sticking a poison needle into her neck. But Shu wanted to shoot her to death in the same way she killed Jo. However, he loses his timing as usual his personality. Then another hit-man, "Death Prince", known for his artistic killing style, are also targeting Mitsuki. At that time, a doctored chandelier by Death Prince falls towards Mitsuki, and Shu quickly saves her.

That night, Shu sneaks into Mitsuki's house. When he pulls a gun on the sleeping Mitsuki, the exploding balloon set off by Death Prince starts to deflate. When Mitsuki wakes up and runs away in a panic, almost falls off the balcony Death Prince has set up. Shu grabs Mitsuki's arm and saves her again. At that moment, reminds Shu of the face of his first love, Aoi. And Shu can't bring himself to kill her looks like Aoi. Mitsuki then tells Shu, "Be my bodyguard"...
